Headline Cofinair Group integrates Decsa

Subline The well-known cooling tower manufacturer Decsa is now joining Jacir and Gohl-KTK brands via the French holding company Cofinair SAS.

Who

Italian company Decsa looks back on over 45 years of experience in developing and manufacturing cooling tower technologies. More than 8000 cooling towers have been supplied to approx. 100 countries.

Decsa will join the existing group of Jacir and Gohl-KTK, now offering the most extensive range of technologies, applications and materials on the market. Every brand has been directly positioned for the market. The three companies are pulling their strengths to create synergies in development, product ranges and sales opportunities.

“This new acquisition will strengthen the Cofinair Group which is now becoming a major player in Europe in the field of evaporative cooling for the premium market. State of the art cooling systems supported by R&D will be the path to our future.”

Doïc Hordern, CEO of Cofinair Group

“This integration enables Decsa to bring its technologies and markets into a structured Group with mutual benefits. I believe together we may tackle the challenge of identifying evaporative cooling as most sustainable system for the heat rejection”.

Nicola de Cardenas, CEO of Decsa Srl

How

This acquisition opens up new opportunities in the field of research & development, enlargement of our product ranges and increased international sales. This demands new strategies and concepts to deliver attractive solutions which meet clients' needs.

Our strategies are based on many years of experience and the combined power of the capabilities and know-how within these organizations. Every single brand brings each one's core capabilities into focus.

Decsa, Gohl-KTK and Jacir brands are already available on the international market through an existing sales network.
